

'Game of Thrones' odd couples and strange groups that are utterly delightful [SPOILERS]

JUNE 15, 2018 by MICHELLE TOMPKINS

From unlikely allies to odd travel companions, strange partnerships reign in 'Game of Thrones'

Game of Thrones has a great way of putting different people together. Sometimes it is for a specific journey or task. Sometimes it is just a matter of lovely coincidence. But every time, the odd pairings have delightful results.

What constitutes an odd pairing in Game of Thrones?

We're not just talking buddies or even budding romances. There isn't much odd about Jon Snow and Sam Tarly being BFFs even though one is brain and the other is brooding brawn. Daenerys' connection with the Dothraki isn't shocking as it was set up from the start. And really, who didn't see Jon and Daenerys coming together for years?

RELATED: George R.R. Martin confirms 'The Winds of Winter' not coming out in 2018

As for Cersei and Jamie ick but not an odd pairing. Missandei and Grey Worm aren't an odd love match, despite his missing parts, but Ser Jorah and Tyrion made for strange travel companions.

Here are the top 20 odd couples or groupings in Game of Thrones.

Let's begin with the most obvious group...